WELL-KNOWN SPORTSMAN CHARGED

Alleged Traffic Offences

Ball of $500 was set on Mr. E. P. Humphreys following his detention by the police authorities for the alleged driving of a car without due care and caution, and for operating an automobile while allegedly under the influence of liquor.

He will come up before Mr. W. Schofield at the Central Magistracy to-day to answer the charges preferred against him for the alleged offences which are stated to have occurred on Saturday night.

It is also alleged that two Chinese were struck down by the car at Gap Road, and one of them is supposed to be in a serious condition.

OLD CHINA HAND

Forty-two Years Spent In East

RETIRE IN TIENTSIN

An exceedingly active, honourable, and fruitful career of over 40 years in China comes to a close with the well-earned retirement of Mr. T. O'Gorman, for many years one of the outstanding foreign personalities in the educational world in this country, and of more recent years an equally conspicuous figure in the business and industrial life of Tientsin as Secretary of the Tientsin Land Investment Co., Ltd., with whose period of remarkable expansion his service coincided. A man of humour and of delightful personality, he is very much likely by all who know him. His friends are happy to know that he proposes to settle down in his own home here.

Mr. O'Gorman arrived in Shanghai from Australia in September, 1894, and later he went to Tientsin. Most of his life in China was spent between these two ports. Mr. and Mrs. O'Gorman are retiring in Tientsin. They have built themselves a charming house on Hongkong Road which they have named "Ellimatta"—the Australian aboriginal word meaning "Our Home"—"Peking" and Tientsin Sunday Times.

LOCAL ESTATES

Carolina Maria Pereira, widow, late of 25, Bowington Road, who died at St. Paul's Hospital, on May 14, 1934, left estate sworn at $1,300. Letters of administration of the estate have been granted to Mr. E. P. H. Lang, Official Administrator.

William Scott Borrow, late of Tientsin, who died in Peking on March 29 this year, left $6,100. Application by Mr. R. A. Wadson, lawyer, for sealing exemplification of the probate of the will has been granted.

Dysentery Scourge

"MAY BE TRACED TO MILK"

STATEMENT BY GOVERNMENT MEDICAL OFFICER

So Far No Report

"BOIL EVERYTHING." IS ADVICE

Although the first death as a result of dysentery was announced in the Press five days ago, yet no report, even of a progress nature, has been furnished by those responsible for the safeguarding of the health of the public.

Thus far there have been seven deaths of European children as a direct result of this dysentery scourge, and, although there is no proof, except of a negative kind, that this deplorable epidemic is lessening, yet the only assistance which the authorities elect to grant a very gravely distressed community is "to make the most careful selection of foodstuffs and boil everything."

Even in a less enlightened community that would be barely tolerable.

What is wanted to be known is:—

How did this outbreak occur?

What methods are employed to assure the public that reasonable precautions are being taken to guarantee the purity of foodstuffs?

These questions have been asked, but the whole matter of Public Health administration appears to be so entangled in "red tape" that the answers have been almost strangled.

Deaths have occurred under most tragic circumstances. What assurance has the public received that the organising of food inspection is such that every possible care in the matter of testing is being prosecuted?

If the food testing system has been found wanting—and surely this outbreak indicates only one thing—it is reasonable to expect the Government's responsible officers to report frankly and alter the system immediately.

WHO IS TO BLAME?

From information obtained yesterday by members of the reporting staff of this paper, it appears that there is a consensus of medical opinion which lays the blame on the milk supply.

Milk suppliers are obliged, by law—or so it was presumed before this outbreak—to market their product according to a standard. Continual vigilance by Government inspectors must be essential to safeguard the requisite standard.

It is significant that immediately this outbreak occurred, the largest milk supplying organisation in the Colony announced that it had, of its own accord, decided to pasteurise its milk. All credit is due to this organisation for taking such action in the best interests of the public so expeditiously.

That action was taken with the approval of the medical authorities.

If the medical authorities "approved" of this method of ensuring milk purity AFTER the outbreak occurred, it seems that their approval in the form of a regulation BEFORE the outbreak might have spared many people much great pain and suffering.

"CARELESS HANDLING OF MILK"

Asked if it was not extraordinary that the recent deaths from dysentery occurred mainly among foreign children, Dr. G. W. Pope, Government Medical Officer of Health, told the "Daily Press" representative who interviewed him yesterday afternoon that the authorities had been led to think that the outbreak may eventually be traced to its source in the milk supply.

Dr. Pope stated, as his reason, that the cases reported came from "better-to-do" families both among the foreign and Chinese. Poor families could not afford to give milk to their children, especially

RESISTANCE CRACKS UP

Insurgent Bombers In Action

DRAMATIC FLYING BATTLE

Toledo, Nov. 16.

Reuter's special correspondent with the insurgents says that Government resistance seemed to crack up when eight bombers preceded by an escort of twenty-four fighting planes each dropped a ton of bombs near the big red main building of the University City and West Park, Madrid.

The whole area was hidden in a vast cloud of black smoke, following prolonged roar of explosion.

Previously three Government planes had taken a dramatic part in a battle, flying very low and fast along the insurgent lines machine-gunning and attacking the troops.

KWANGTUNG FINANCES

Mr. T. L. Soong Due To Arrive To-day

Mr. T. L. Soong, Finance Commissioner of Kwangtung Province, who went to Nanking some months ago to confer with Mr. Kung Chang-hsi, Finance Minister, regarding matters connected with the financial affairs of Kwangtung, left Shanghai on Saturday last aboard the French Mail Liner and is expected to arrive here to-day.

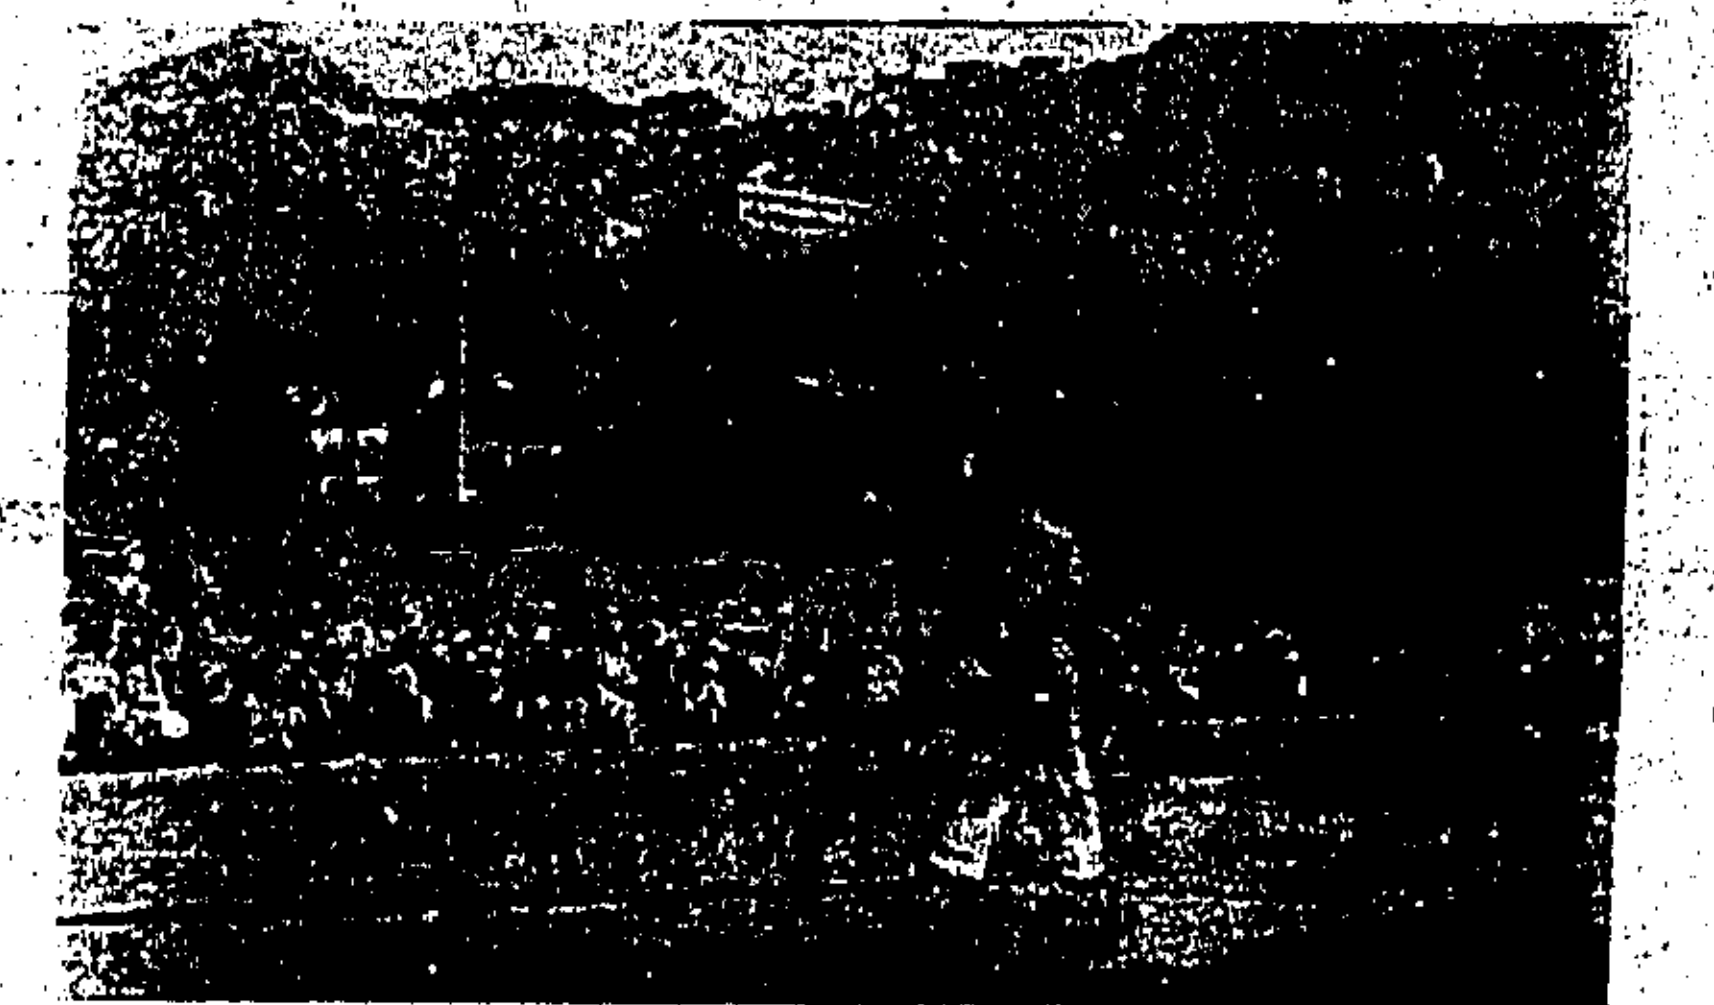

His prolonged absence in the North led to a rumour that he was not returning to Canton.

MODERNISING CANTON

New Trackless Tram Service Planned

GOVERNMENT SUPPORT

Canton is following the example set by Shanghai, and is to inaugurate a new trackless tram service. A preparation commission under the auspices of Mayor Tseng Yang-fu has been established.

It is learned that the capital for the operation of the tram service has been fixed at $3,000,000. The amount will be appropriated from the Municipal Treasury and also from merchants.

The trackless tram service in the city will be completed by three stages. Survey of the routes has been opened and will be finished within this week.

MR. A. GRAD'S EFFORTS

After the notice convening the meeting was read by Mr. D. A. Pockson, the President of the Boy Scouts Association, Hong Kong Branch, Mr. E. Cock, dealt with the annual report and commented on the various items shown. Special reference was made to Mr. A. Grad, Assistant Commissioner, through whose efforts, the speaker pointed out, the success of the campfire display was largely due. Mr. Cock then proposed that the annual report be passed as read, which motion was seconded by Sir Wm. Hornell.

MR. MACDONALD AND LABOUR

The Edinburgh Conference

DEMOCRACY'S PERIL

Mr. Ramsay MacDonald, President of the National Labour Committee, reminded a conference of the party, held in London, recently, of the circumstances which led to the formation of the National Government in 1931, states the "Observer."

The idea that when National Labour acted as it did in 1931, it lost its faith, its principle, and its ideal, was, he said, a pure myth.

In a reference to the distressed industrial areas, Mr. MacDonald criticised "the imaginative claims of the Labour Party speakers in Edinburgh of what they would have done if they had remained in office."

"It would be a much greater service to the people doomed to live in these areas," he said, "if, instead of making these imaginative statements, opposition Labour would come and sit down with the National Government, exchange experiences, and try to find how work and wages could be brought back to those mines and villages."

"GROTESQUE CARICATURES." "When the Opposition try to present us as reactionaries, as men of hard hearts who have lost their earlier faiths, they know better than anyone that they are painting grotesque caricatures; and when they talk of Government failures, they have not contributed one practical idea nor made one practical proposition, except an unlimited and, in the end, futile expenditure of public money to relieve distress."

Labour, he continued, would not be able to find its high road onwards until it picked up the way it left in 1931, the unhappy exhibition at the Edinburgh Conference was the direct result of its party failure to face its difficulties, and go ahead as leaders of opinion and action.

"A Government pledged to carry out the multi-sided and contradictory declarations of Edinburgh must be a great terror to the Labour and peace interest, as to the country as a whole."

"WHY QUARREL ABOUT LABOUR?"

"I wish the mind of the country would concentrate on realities," he went on. "Why quarrel about labels when there is so much necessity to enlist the support of everyone who sees the advisability and the wisdom of doing something to solve our immediate problems, whatever the generic label may be that can be stuck upon them?"

There could scarcely be a shadow of a question that had the situation in 1931—either in its political or in its economic aspects—been faced on a party basis, democracy and liberty could hardly have survived.

"I repeat," he emphasised, "that an irresponsible partisanship saps the unity, the vigour, the determination and the spirit of democracy to protect itself against the swift initiative of attacking dictatorships, whether of Right or Left, whereas a National Government, with the co-operation of Labour wherever possible, would be an unassailable united front guarding democracy."

"A copying of the Russian example is madness and would devour our industrial population in distress. Nor can it be worked out in terms of a class war, which has no constructive value. It requires a national consciousness, an honest co-operation between all men of good will, and a single-minded devotion as to community well-being."

"The keynote must be evolution, not revolution, transformation, and not violent 'unsettlement'."

Earl De La Warr said that at no time was National Labour needed more than to-day. There were hundreds of thousands—pay, millions—of men and women who were hesitating between an Opposition which they despised and the Government which they feared was too much to the right. They must make up their minds, or events would pass them by.

It was not enough just to withhold support from the Opposition—to many progressive minds were sterilising themselves at the moment—and National Labour wanted this support.

On the proposition of the Rev. H. Dunnico, the conference passed a resolution recording its gratitude for the great services Mr. MacDonald had rendered to his fellow citizens during the past

GERMAN YOUTHS

Great Annual March

While Germany was putting the finishing touches to the preparations for the Xth Olympic Games held in Berlin in 1936 and while the press, broadcasting and the public were fully occupied with the events and the festive rejoicings on the occasion of this "contest of chariots and songs" to use Schiller's words, small parties of German boys with Hitler Youth banner in front were marching along the roads in all parts of the Reich. They were only small parties, marching along the roads in well-disciplined formation to the same goal, detachments of the Hitler Youth from all parts of the country engaged in the great annual march to Nürnberg, the Franconian congress town where they assembled at the beginning of the Reich Party Congress.

Away from the noisy bustle of everyday life, but tirelessly and with their gaze fixed unerringly on the goal, these little columns started on the march, and the sound of their rhythmic steps already brought the Nürnberg Congress nearer.

FIRST IDEA OF COMRADESHIP

Their route took them through German towns and villages, past fields where the harvest is now being gathered and through forests that stretch across hill and dale. They also passed innumerable summer camps where at this time of year many new "pimples," as the youngest boys are called, are obtaining their first idea of comradeship and socialist community life, and where they are being given their first idea of German Socialism, adapted to their youthful years. The route followed by these parties on their way to Nürnberg also took them past the leisure camps of the Hitler Youth where, at this time of year, hundreds of thousands of young German workers are spending a sufficiently paid holiday, a plan which has now been achieved. Although previous generations were never tired of speaking of it, they could never put it into practice because they started from entirely false premises which led to equally erroneous results owing to narrow-minded ideas of class and to theoretical prejudices.

IMPOSITION OF OBLIGATION

The boys in these camps, who are from 14 to 18 years of age, are certainly conscious of the advantage of enjoying two or three weeks of paid leisure in contrast to most of their foreign contemporaries.

But they also know that this advantage imposes an obligation on them, namely the obligation to utilize their renewed powers later on all the more unreservedly in the service of the nation, and to continue to do their best to impart to German economy, in which great changes of conceptions are at present taking place, the last and final change of course which will give it a National Socialist character.

This young generation feels more than any other that a genuine revolution occurred in Germany in 1933; not a "putsch," nor a change of cabinet, but the beginning of a complete change of conceptions and a fresh evaluation of all accepted opinions.

This was also the atmosphere of the World Congress for Leisure Time and Recreation which was recently held in Hamburg under the leadership of the Reich Organization Leader and Leader of the German Labour Front, Dr. Ley.

"KEEP WOMEN OUT OF ROTARY"

A "keep women out of Rotary" plea was made by the Rev. J. B. B. Chairman of the London District of Rotary International, when addressing a meeting of Rotarians at Chingford recently.

"Rotary is a man's affair," he said. "In America the ladies have their place in Rotary; in fact, they have their own organisation, but they are there only because they are the wives of Rotarians. I hope the time will never come when the feminine influence controls a Rotary club."

forty years, first in building up a party to give constitutional expression to new political ideas, and more recently in forming the National Government, "which is still enabling our democracy to meet the dangers and the problems which face the country."

A resolution was also carried reaffirming adherence to the principle of National Government.

ANOTHER HOLBEIN FOR NEW YORK

A $100,000 Purchase

An announcement in the New York "Literary Digest" that the art dealer Mr. Abels Silberman had bought a picture by Holbein from a private collection at Basel for $100,000 ($20,000) has aroused much interest, as New York is famous for its Holbein gallery, states "The Times."

The portrait is on a 4in. round oak-wood panel, the bottom of a travelling portrait-box, and is similar to those in the Wallace Collection and in the possession of the Duke of Burdeuch. It was evidently executed for a family keepsake the year before the artist died. It bears his initials in gold, the year it was painted, 1542, and his age, 45. The picture, against a dark blue background, portrays Holbein almost entirely full face, wearing a Mack cap and jacket open at the throat, with a white lace-edged shirt.

At Basel the opinions of art critics and university professors differ as to the attribution of this portrait to Holbein himself, and there has been a dispute similar to that of December, 1933, over the Castle Howard Holbein of King Henry VIII. Professor Paul Ganz, of Basel University, has never doubted its authenticity. In

SCHOOLBOYS' TOUR OF S. AFRICA

The School Empire-Tour Committee are sending a party of boys to South Africa on January 8. Five or six States of the Union will be visited, and the tour will end on April 23. The party will sail under the aegis of the Dominions Office.

"Boys must be between 17 and 19 on January 1. They will be in charge of a Public School Master, with one or two assistants; there will be room for about 30 in all. The cost will be about £110. Boys who wish to go should apply to their Headmasters."

A study published in the "Jahrbuch für Kunst und Kunstpflege in der Schweiz" he shows that the picture which has now left Basel for America was painted by Holbein in 1542 as a family souvenir, from a larger portrait which has been lost. A sketch of it came to Florence, where an artist of the early eighteenth century painted it over. After Holbein's death his pupils produced several similar miniature portraits; but they are all dated later than the original now sold. The portrait in question, once in the possession of the noble Baltic family of Stackelberg of Faehna, was bought in 1923 by the Basle family of Paravicini-Engel, which has now parted with it.

HABITUAL VAGRANTS DISAPPEARING

Sir Kingsley Wood, Minister of Health, addressing a meeting of Essex Riding local authorities at Beverley, recently, said the one-time old familiar vagrant was disappearing and the number of casuals was being steadily reduced.

Young men who had taken to the road, had been persuaded to enter hostels and to train themselves for a more useful life, and old and infirm people were settling down in suitable institutions. Better still, in many cases efforts had been increasingly successful in getting the children of habitual vagrants to children's homes or schools.

Better provision was now being made for the maintenance, education and aftercare of destitute and homeless children. Large homes of the "barrack" type were now only to be found in a few districts, and the homes established during the last year had all been either single homes or small groups of cottages.

Children in such homes went to school with other children of the district and joined in their games and recreational facilities.

The average number of persons in receipt of institutional and domiciliary out-relief had declined this year.

SCOTS' ONE WORD

To Englishmen's 1500

Scotland's leading scientists have given official circles a good laugh in Washington, U.S.A., at the expense of their English colleagues, states the "Bulletin".
During the ceremony of presenting a bust of Lord Kelvin to the Smithsonian Institute, a congratulatory cable of 1500 words was read from representative men of science in England.
Lord Kelvin's great work was done during his 53 years at Glasgow University as Professor of Natural Philosophy. A cable was therefore also received from Scottish scientists.
It was duly read.
It consisted of one word—"Fetichism."

A CALL TO YOUTH

Evolution And Not Revolution

THE NATIONAL LABOUR CONFERENCE

A call to youth was made by Mr. MacDonald, M.P., Lord President of the Council, in an address at the National Labour Conference at St. Ermin's Hotel, Westminster, recently states "The Times".
Lord De La Warr, chairman of the National Labour Committee, who presided, said that at no time was National Labour needed more than to-day. It was not enough to withhold support from the Opposition; far too many progressive minds were sterilizing themselves from effective influence. National Labour should help to ensure that the policy of the National Government was bold and constructive, and that they should develop as well as consolidate. To talk of saving democracy was splendid, but to prove that a democracy could produce an AI nation with equal or greater force and imagination than could a dictatorship was even better.
Mr. MacDonald, president of the National Labour Committee, said that Labour would not be able to find its high road onwards until it picked up the way it left in 1931, and the unhappy exhibition of confusion and political inconsistencies of the Edinburgh conference were the direct results of the failure of the party in 1931 to face its difficulties and go ahead as leaders of opinion and action. For some time before 1931, and to a very marked degree since then, the body of electors which had attached themselves to no one political party had been growing. All the old parties had to be enlivened by liberal drafts from the life and interests of the young generation. They must create a conviction in youth that what they were working for was worthy of their spirit to spend it self upon and to sacrifice itself for, it need be. That was the position of National Labour.

Referring to the need to keep healthy, he said the mind of youth should be awakened to the beauties of the countryside, the choice of exercise in the open air, and the historical interest of the neighbourhood.
To deal with the problem of the distressed areas, new industries were required, and settlement on the land was specially promising. An adequate agricultural population was essential, and its provision should be among the first concerns of the State. The recent monetary agreement between France, the United States of America, and Great Britain had opened a new road to a rational and economic international trade. This could be worked out in terms of a class war, it required a national consciousness and honest co-operation. The keynote of effort must be evolution and not revolution. That conception of the progress of society would, he believed, inspire the generous imagination of youth to social service and enlist it in a political crusade which would mark this generation as a pioneer in the next epoch of civilization.

A resolution was approved placing on record the gratitude of the conference for Mr. MacDonald's great services to his fellow-citizens in the past 40 years, first in building up a party to give constitutional expression to new political ideas, and more recently in forming the National Government.
In moving this resolution the Rev. H. Dunning said that they would follow Mr. MacDonald's leadership and seek to build up another movement. He hoped that conference would be the starting point of a great campaign to carry their principles throughout the country.

"HIS BROTHER'S WIFE"

"His Brother's Wife" is the title of the daring picture which is showing at the King's theatre to-day, with the attractive co-starring team of Barbara Stanwyck and Robert Taylor.

The play of human emotions under tremendous strain has seldom been more powerfully drawn on the screen. A capacity audience yesterday, attested to the power of the theme and the artistry of the players, nor did it overlook the remarkably brilliant work of the director, W. S. Van Dyke.

Taylor, now the most popular male star in Hollywood, appears in the role of venturesome scientist about to embark on an expedition into the tropical jungle. On his final "fling" in New York he encounters a red-headed girl and falls in love with her instantly.

A daring theme is presented delicately, yet without once weakening the complicated structure of the story. Miss Stanwyck performs what many critics consider to be the finest role of her career. Jean Hersholt as the hardened explorer, is superb, and Taylor, without question, again demonstrates his remarkable talent as an actor. A capable cast gives excellent support.

"MARY OF SCOTLAND"

The life of Mary Stuart as recalled by the Katharine Hepburn, Frederic March costarring picture "Mary of Scotland" which close to-day at the Queen's and Alhambra Theatres is a dramatic monument to woman's ways of controlling man with the subtle weapons of charm and wit.

The R.K.O. Radio film recounts that lovely Queen's conquest of the hostile John Knox, who, when he regained his balance, helped blast her from her throne with his preachment. It makes a dramatic highpoint of the way she saved herself and the Earl of Bothwell from death by hoodwinking her dangerously jealous husband, Lord Darnley into betraying the very nobles he helped in the spectacular murder of her favourite, Rizzio.

But though Mary Stuart's life is potent force, since the film concentrates on the celebrated romance which led Mary to forget strategy and risk her life and throne to live briefly with the treacherous Bothwell, played by March.

John Ford, winner of the 1935 Motion Pictures award for his directing of "The Informer", Florence Eldridge as Queen Elizabeth, Douglas Walton as Darnley and John Caradine as Rizzio have important roles in the supporting cast of some forty players.

Boris Karloff's next film for Universal will be "The Man in the Cab." It will start as soon as Karloff is finished with the Charlie Chan picture, that he is making with Warner Oland.

John Van Druten's play, "The Distant Side," has been bought by M.G.M. No cast has yet been announced.

"WHAT STARS FORETELL"

High Court Ruling On Appeal

The question whether the contents of an article in a Sunday newspaper headed "What the Stars Foretell" came within the mischief of Section 4 of the Vagrancy Act, 1824, was discussed before Lord Hewart and Justices du Parcq and Goddard in a King's Bench Divisional Court recently.

The article was written by Mr. R. C. Naylor in the "Sunday Express" and against him a summons had been issued by Mr. Maurice Barbanell, editor of the "Psychic News," alleging that he was "a person who pretended or professed to tell fortunes."

A magistrate at the Mansion House dismissed the summons, having come to the conclusion that the matter in question was too vague and general in character to constitute an offence against the Act. This decision the Court upheld.

Mr. Gilbert Beyfus, K.C., for Mr. Barbanell, said that the case was one of first impression, and not susceptible of much argument. He asked the Court to hold that the magistrate was wrong.

Mr. Justice du Parcq asked whether anybody had ever been prosecuted for forecasting the winner of a horse-race?

Mr. Beyfus said he did not think so. He explained that Mr. Naylor purported, by astrology, to tell the fortunes of people whose birthdays he enumerated.

"THE ROAD TO AMBITION"

"He tells them," said Counsel, "what may be their fortunes in finance or love affairs, which I suggest is the stock-in-trade of the ordinary fortune-teller. For instance he tells people, born about a particular time, that the ambitious 'go-getter' will whizz along the road to ambition." (Laughter).

Quoting from the article Mr. Beyfus said that one passage included a birthday prediction which ran: "The arrows of fate will whizz past your head this year." (Laughter).

The article predicted that certain persons would "have luck if they gambled on 'near-dead' shares... but their luck in love might be poor." (Laughter).

"Has the proprietor of 'Old Moore's Almanack' ever been prosecuted?" Mr. Justice du Parcq asked.

Mr. Beyfus said he was not aware of any such prosecution. Without calling on Mr. Christmas Humphreys (for Mr. Naylor) the Court dismissed the appeal, with costs.

"The question is not whether the article is a collection of imbecile and repulsive twaddle," said Lord Hewart. "It is that had been the question there could be only one answer. The question, however, is whether the article came within the mischief of the enactment."

"The magistrate came to the conclusion that the statements were too vague and general in character to bring the article within the Act, and we think he was right."

Justices du Parcq and Goddard concurred.

"KLONDIKE ANNIE"

Toss out all your preconceived notions of Mae West; all you who have only visualized her as a languorous creature moving softly around in shimmering silks and satins are in for the surprise of your lives when you see her in "Klondike Annie," which is now showing at the Majestic Theatre.

This reviewer, for one, certainly sat right up when Mae leave the Barbary Coast of San Francisco, in the surroundings which we've grown accustomed to associating with her, and winds up in the frozen region of the Klondike gold-fields; But don't be alarmed—even wrapped in a big fur parka, the West curves are every bit as luscious as we like to see them, and although her lips may be cold and frost-bitten, they still retain the ability to toss off wisecracks that will, we prophesy, be repeated in every city and town for months to come; until the next Mae West film, to be exact!

"Klondike Annie" is recommended as healthy entertainment. Under the able direction of Raoul Walsh, McLaglen is superb in the role of the hard-boiled captain who meets, for the first time in his swashbuckling existence, a woman who can make him toe the mark.

NEW £6,000,000 FILM COMPANY

More Cinemas For London And Provinces

The formation of a British company with a capital of over £6,000,000 to build cinemas in London and provincial cities is contemplated.

The company will be a combine of Union Cinemas and its subsidiary companies. Mr. C. F. Bernhard, who is to be managing director of the new company, if formed, and who is now managing director of Union Cinemas, said "As soon as final arrangements for the new company have been made in the city a statement will be issued."

The policy likely to be adopted by the new company will be to build cinemas capable of seating at least 3,000 in large cities, rather than smaller cinemas in less important towns. London may have twelve of the new cinemas. It is stated that sites have been bought, Hammer Smith and Kensington being among the districts chosen. Shareholders in Union Cinemas and its subsidiaries will probably be given notice soon of a scheme for converting present holdings into shares for the proposed new company.

Spencer Tracy is taking singing lessons. He will sing for the first time in "Captains Courageous."

Twentieth Century-Fox announce that they will remake "King of the Khyber Rifles." It has already been made once as a talkie, with Victor McLaglen starring.

DEATH OF CHILD

Causes Court Case To Adjourn

Because of the death of a child, which figured prominently in a case brought by a woman against her husband alleging desertion, it was decided at the Kowloon Magistracy yesterday to again remand the case pending further discussions by both parties.

At a previous hearing, Mr. J. M. D'Almada Remedios, revealed that the child of his client, Mui Sun Tung, 28, of No. 72 Fook Wah Street was taken from her on the date of its birth. Following further repeated cruelty, his client took action against her husband, Pang Tah Wau, alias Pang Chiu-chun of No. 112 Cheung Sha Wan Road, 2nd floor, alleging desertion, neglect to provide maintenance and persistent cruelty.

Mr. F. X. D'Almada, Sen., appeared for the defence.

The case was remanded till November 27 at 2.30 p.m.

WOOL STOLEN

China Emporium Victimized

The China Emporium was again victimized the day before yesterday when a half-pound skein of "Beehive" brand wool, was stolen. Two Chinese women were charged with the theft at the Central Magistracy yesterday. They were: Cheng Kan, 17, and Chan Kam, 28.

Sgt. Davies said that Chen Kan asked Lau Shi, a salesman at the China Emporium, to look at some wool. She remained there for a long time and Lau became suspicious and kept a wary eye on her. She left soon afterwards and returned later with the second defendant.

While bargaining with the salesman over some article Chan Kam flicked the half-pound skein of wool worth $1.55, which she hid under the jacket of the child she was carrying.

The salesman, ever watchful, saw her nefarious act and had her arrested.

Chan Kam was fined $10 or one month's imprisonment, while the other accused was discharged because of lack of evidence.

QUICK POLICE WORK

Daring Robbery Sequel

A sequel to an audacious robbery on November 5, when Miss Rosemary Lam, of No. 163 Fuk Wah Street, was victimized of a gold bracelet valued at $50, was heard at the Kowloon Magistracy yesterday.

Two men, both unemployed stood in the dock charged with theft. They were: Chan Hop Sung, 24, and Lau Ting Yeck, 34. The case was remanded for a week on the application of Inspector W. R. Chesterwoods.

It will be remembered that Miss Lam was on her way to pay a call on a friend residing at No. 281, Cheung Sha Wan Road on the date in question, and when ascending the stairs, she stood aside to allow a man going down the steps to pass her, and at the same time to allow another person coming up to pass also.

When the first man reached her, he put his arms around her neck, and a struggle ensued during which both of the combatants fell down the stairs. When Miss Lam picked herself up she found that the bracelet was missing. She also saw both men making a hasty retreat towards Shamshuiipo.

EAR-RINGS THIS TIME!

Snatcher Brought Before Court

Ng Lam, 26, unemployed, was found guilty of snatching a pair of gold ear-rings from a 42 year-old spinster, Cheung Ngan, at Pokfulam Road on November 15, when he was charged before Mr. W. Schofield at the Central Magistracy yesterday.

Sgt. Mottram, in charge of the prosecution, said that defendant came up from behind the woman and snatched the ear-rings from her, and ran down Third Street. A passer-by, Chan Chau Tong, apprehended the culprit.

One part of the ear-rings was recovered, but the rest valued at $7 is still unrecovered.

Defendant was remanded for twenty-four hours for medical examination preparatory to a thrashing.

The Magistrate commended Chan Chau Tong on his public spirited action.

MURDER CHARGE

Shamshuiipo Market Fight Sequel

Man Kwai, 30, a butcher of the Sham Shui Po Market, was brought before Mr. Q. A. A. Macfadyen at the Kowloon Magistracy yesterday, for murder of Chan Wa, 22, who died from injuries received while attending a meat stall at the market.

It was alleged that the trouble arose over an argument about the use of a meat saw. During the dispute Man Kwai, snatched up a long butcher's knife and plunged it deep into Chan's abdomen. A large crowd, who witnessed the quarrel saw the latter collapse.

The defendant was immediately taken into custody by friends of the wounded man.

Chan died in an ambulance on the way to the Kowloon Hospital.

Inspector W. R. Chesterwoods appeared for the prosecution.

The case was remanded for a week.

NEW BARRACKS

For Garrison At Stanley.

The news that Stanley Peninsula will shortly be stationed as a barracks does not mean that Hong Kong is increasing her fortifications.

Under the Washington Treaty the Colony is still forbidden to increase her armaments, and the Treaty is still in effect. The barracks, however, does not come under the category of fortifications.

Stanley was the first site for a garrison in the Colony.

PRISON NEARLY FINISHED

The new prison in construction there, almost nearing completion, will hold over 1,000 inmates to be removed from the Victoria and Lai Chi Kok Prisons.

ACCIDENTAL DEATH

Workman Killed By Ricocheted Metal

TAIKOO DOCK ACCIDENT

The inquest into the circumstances of the death of Sze Kuen, a foundryman employed at the Tarkoo Dockyard, concluded at the Central Magistracy yesterday. The jury comprising, Messrs. F. Lopes, (foreman), M. Kunhiro and Wong Po Lin, returned a verdict of accidental death.

Dr. G. H. Thomas, of the Government Civil Hospital, said that he held a post mortem on the deceased and found that death was due to a fractured skull which ran the whole length of the head, and an injury to the brain.

Death could have been caused by the forceful application of a hard object such as was exhibited in court. The object was a rectangular piece of scrap iron, weighing about ten pounds.

Mr. G. T. Bird, the head watchman at the Tarkoo Dockyard, said that he was called to attend deceased after the accident. Arrangements were made to take him to the Civil Hospital.

The piece of iron in court was handed to him as the cause of the injury, and he was told that it had come through the roof.

A propeller was being scrapped at the time, and it was believed that a part of it ricocheted up into the air above 60 feet and came crashing through the corrugated asbestos roof, falling on the deceased and killing him.

No accidents from that source had occurred for the past twenty seven years.

The next witness was Sin Wah, crane driver for the past four years at the Tarkoo Dockyard. He denied knowledge of any part of the accident, and said that he had never seen any scraps of iron flying at a distance of sixty feet.

Sze Ting, the father of the deceased deposed that he identified the body of his son at the Victoria Mortuary.

DUMB MUTE CHARGED

Case Remanded

Wong Tsai Hing, 26, unemployed, a dumb mute was brought before the Second Kowloon Magistracy, Mr. E. Himsforth yesterday, charged with theft of a purse containing $5.52.

Detective Sergeant Haynes, of the Water Police C.I.D. who prosecuted, stated that when arrested the man made signs with his hands. At the station these signs were translated to mean that accused denied theft, claiming that the purse had been picked up from the street.

The purse was actually found, said the prosecuting officer, tucked in the defendant's shoe.

The case was remanded for a week for further enquiries.

Believer In The Future Of The World

Field-Marshal Lord Milne does not share Youth's pessimism of the future.

In a speech after he had distributed the prizes at Cranleigh School recently, he said he had been told by a young man that among youth there was a great feeling of uncertainty and hopelessness, because they did not know what the future had in store. They had been told that a great war was going to happen which would engulf them, and that therefore they adopted the attitude, "Let us make the best of things, enjoy life, and let the future look after itself."

We were told by eminent men, continued Lord Milne, that the next war would kill civilisation, and that civilisation was cracking. He could not help thinking that the reason for such statements was that the people who made them did not like the manners of the present.

"No more do I," Lord Milne added, "but I do not hold with that feeling of pessimism. I cannot believe that the Almighty Power who made this wonderful earth is going to allow man to destroy all that He had done. I am a firm optimist in the future of the world, if properly handled."

In bringing up the subject of the financial position of the Boy Scouts Association, the Commissioner appealed for better and further support for the cause. He then made the announcement of the donations received from Sir Robert Ho-tung and the anonymous giver and stated that the future was more hopeful.

SUNLIGHT LOST IN FOG

Nuisance Of Smoke

Sir George Newman presided at the final sessions of the conference of the National Smoke Abatement Society at the Science Museum, South Kensington, recently. He said that he had always been impressed with the extraordinary backwardness, the almost disgraceful backwardness, of this country in regard to the occurrence of the smoke nuisance and the neglect of the control. We were far more backward than we realized in regard to the matter when compared with our great neighbours across the Channel, states "The Times."

The evidence was before all men, and the difference between the district which had a smoke pall and that which had the light of the heavens upon it was unmistakable.

So far from cancer and tuberculosis being two separate diseases, there is now evidence to show that they are so very closely related that it is unprofitable any longer to investigate one without reference to the other. With these words, Sir Penderill Varrier-Jones, Medical Director of the Papworth Village Settlement, near Cambridge, introduced a new "hypothesis."

Speaking on "Atmospheric Pollution in Relation to Tuberculosis," Sir Penderill Varrier-Jones briefly reviewed existing literature on the subject, and said that Professor Lyle Cummins had recently suggested, that there might be "a factor in coal mines which tends to neutralize the danger of tuberculosis."

The speaker then turned to the relation of smoke and cancer, and showed that this had been observed by many authorities, including Dr. Meyers, of the New York Department of Health, who had questioned whether there might not be a "cancerogenic factor liberated by combustion." "Is that factor," inquired Sir Penderill Varrier-Jones, "linked with the protective factor noted by Lyle Cummins in relation to tuberculosis?"

Fresh air and sunlight never did anyone any harm, and children would not get damaged by exposure to open air as long as they did not get shivery and blue. If he went to post a letter he never put on a hat or overcoat, but went straight out in the weather, whatever it might be, because he knew that the reaction so caused was good for one.

and tuberculosis mortality already noted by Dr. Cherry, and how, in his book "Tuberculosis Cancer and Zinc," now about to be published, he had concluded by suggesting that they may be a pathogenic bacteriophage, indigenous to the tubercle bacillus, which after subduing tuberculosis subsequently causes cancer.

It must be emphasized that the Cruickshank hypothesis was only a hypothesis as yet. It might be conclusively destroyed. But, if it were upheld, it must surely rank as a contribution of the utmost importance towards the final conquest of the two worst enemies of the human race—tuberculosis, the "White Scourge," and cancer, the terror of the civilized world.

Sir Henry Gauvain, speaking on "Light and Clean Air in Relation to Surgical Tuberculosis," said that it was a common fallacy to imagine that where sun treatment was indicated the patient should be sent to a very sunny locality where there was intense and continuous sunshine of high actinic value. For very strong, dark adults capable of responding to intense exposure that was commendable; but to the majority of sick people initial weak stimuli were to be preferred. There were few countries where sun treatment might be practised under more ideal conditions in the spring and summer than in the South of England, where abundant sunshine for therapeutic purposes was available, sometimes largely in excess of the patient's needs.

"SMOKE-POLLUTED CITIES"
Sir Leonard Hill spoke on "The Obstruction of Light by Smoke and its Effect on Health." He said that we had pure water and good drainage, clean streets and courts, and now we must have clean air. We should find it far less costly to prevent than to cure disease. We lost the genial warmth and light of the sun by our dirty habits. Exposure of the skin to sunlight increased the disease-resisting powers of the body, but our smoke-polluted cities gave the opposite of ideal conditions. Fog took away the sunlight and the blackened walls reflected little of what there was.

Speaking of the curative value of sunlight and fresh air, he said that our Victorian ancestors had some deplorable ideas about shutting windows and doors, and putting sandbags along the edges to stop draughts. It was difficult to overcome those ideas, for they had got into the blood and were taught to children.

REVENUE LOSS
The Chinese Maritime Customs at Tientsin estimates that the administration there has sustained a loss of $34,602,157 between August 1, 1935 as a result of the widespread smuggling in that area, reports the "Shungpao." The goods smuggled in from the East Hopei bogus state, during this period included: 120,068 bags of rayon, 8,342 bales of cigarette paper, 975,807 bags of sugar, 234,166 boxes of miscellaneous goods and 6,380 bags of seafoods.

DATE ALTERED
An announcement from the Hon. Secretary of the Hong Kong Chinese Recreation Club reads as follows: "The C.R.C. tennis committee wishes to announce that they have decided to postpone the date for the Open Mixed Doubles semi-final rounds until November 28. The date for the final round will be announced later."

MIXED DOUBLES
Captain Milne, and Mrs. Ashton, on Sunday entered the semi-final of the Colony mixed doubles tennis championship when they beat G. E. Clarke and Mrs. McCaw in a second round encounter by 6-3, 6-4.

MURDERER

VICTIM

Nanking, Nov. 10.

The murderer of Mrs. Hsu Shih-chu, nee Susan Waddell of California, whose dead body was discovered at Peichuko (hill) on Oct. 15 last year, has been arrested at Ssuhsien, in northern Anhwei, it is officially confirmed.

The murderer is a rickshaw puller, named Liu Yung-hsing, 24 years of age, and an ex-soldier.

Questioned at the Metropolitan Police Department, Liu confessed to the crime. On Oct. 14 last year, he said, he conveyed the lady (whose husband, Dr. Hsu, is Superintendent of the Public Health Station at Kiangning and a technical expert of the National Health Administration) from the Central Hospital to the foot of the hill (Peichuko) in his rickshaw.

Mrs. Hsu, he added, had in her purse a large quantity of banknotes, which he saw when she came out of the Hospital. (She was a Lecturer on Physiology at the Central Midwifery School attached to the Hospital).

When they reached the hill, it was already dark. Seeing that nobody was about, Liu continued, he suddenly stopped and strangled Mrs. Hsu to death with the aid of his belt. After taking away the money, he abandoned the corpse at the foot of the hill, where it was found next day by the police.

Liu is being detained pending trial by the Metropolitan Court shortly.—

Reasons why
'MANSION'
is so economical

'Mansion' being a highly concentrated wax polish, only very little is needed to give a mirror-like brilliance, to a large floor surface.

'Mansion', the preservative polish, lengthens the life of Linoleums.

Because 'Mansion' gives such a lasting brilliance, floors need less frequent polishing.

M.C.C. MATCH AT SYDNEY

Chipperfield Just Misses Century

Sydney, Nov. 16.
At the close of play to-day, the M.C.C. had lost two wickets in scoring 95 in reply to the New South Wales total of 328 in their second innings.

First innings scores were N.S.W. 273, M.C.C. 153. The visitors are thus 351 runs behind with eight wickets in hand.

In the home team's second innings, Chipperfield scored 97 not out in 227 minutes, hitting five boundaries. He was very unlucky in missing the century mark.

McCabe, who scored 48, was suffering from an injury to his groin and played with the assistance of a runner. He was caught by Allen off Copson.

Allen changed the M.C.C. batting order. Worthington opening with Barnett. Worthington scored 28 in half an hour and Barnett was run out for 35 after he had been an hour and a half at the wicket.

Hammond has at present 23 to his credit.

The match will be concluded tomorrow.

BRITAIN And SPAIN

It is a matter for genuine gratification that Britain's leaders "kept their heads when all about them were (metaphorically) losing theirs" on the subject of intervention in Spain.

Perhaps by adopting a fearlessly impartial policy regarding this Spanish civil war, Britain has prevented the effusion of blood for which the world should be grateful, though certain dictatorial leaders may not feel gratified.

There was recently a most vital debate in the House of Commons, and as matters have eventuated in Spain, it is very interesting, even in the comparatively distant and isolated area of Hong Kong, to review the basic principles which motivated the opposition and the Government.

It is well to be clear where the policy of the opposition differed from that of the Government. From the start, as Mr. Arthur Greenwood affirmed, the opposition has not stood for non-intervention, but favoured the supplying of arms to the Spanish Government. Apart from the fact that this country had no surplus of arms that it could have released, the direct consequence of such an act must have been to intensify the distresses and hasten the defeat of the Government forces.

Arms for the Spanish Government, from any source whatever—and only one considerable reservoir was available after France had taken her decision not to intervene—would have been answered by help for the Nationalists.

In any form of competing intervention Italy and Germany are immensely better placed, both geographically and in immediately available munitions, to render assistance than is Russia. In practice, the policy of the opposition would have involved the speedier defeat of the Government which it wished to defend.

In the result that would have been a minor matter. Formal intervention on one side or the other would have almost certainly carried war far beyond the boundaries of Spain. The object of both the French Government and of Britain had been to limit the area of strife. The issue in the debate was not whether there had been contraventions on the one side or the other of the standstill agreement, but whether the attempt to confine the conflagration to Spain, as the policy most likely to keep peace in Europe was to be abandoned.

Criticism of defects in the working of the non-intervention plan do not affect the broad truth that so long as the nations hold together, there is a strong safeguard against such European

ROMANCE Of The WATERFRONT

(BY E.J.M.)

(Our Staff reporter who "covers" the waterfront)

It's very different down at the wharf. City folks keep hanging around, looking on wistfully—wistfully, because they know here they don't belong.

The working gangs move about briskly like ants. I try to talk to them but they don't seem to hear me, there's such a to-do going on. Then, too, there are the ships. It's exciting to go aboard them. I'd like to work on them, where I could enjoy, as an obligato to my thoughts, the clank and crash of all those movements. I'd like to. There I could find an outlet for my dynamic energy.

On the big passenger liners, those smart-looking officers have little time to spare me. They are always busy answering questions which passengers endlessly shower on them. The atmosphere is very city-like. I know I am on a ship from the smell of tarred wood. Clean uniforms swirl around me, paying me little, if any, attention. I feel that romance and adventure is missing somewhere, and so I go down the gangway and walk up to the dirty-looking tramps berthed at the other end.

There I feel I am the prodigal son returned to the fold. And what a contrast to the other ships I have just visited! Grease-stained clothes and unshaven chins hide the real characters of the men who make those ships their home.

I am bewildered by their friendliness, the more so because I know they are genuine. I feel at home. A thousand questions are showered on me.

"What's going on in this town?"

"Where do we get a good dinner?"

But nothing ever happens, you say? Just wait!

"You hit me!"

"No, you hit me first!"

I join the amused crowd gathered around the would-be combatants. Like the others, I speculate as to whom would strike the first blow.

The "fight" develops into a sort of tug-of-war. The crowd grows bigger.

But the argument is interrupted. The burly figure of an Indian watchman thrusts itself between the pair. The son of India gives a deaf ear to their explanations and with a wave of his stick tells them to be off.

The crowd trickles away and so I go elsewhere.

Aboard one of the vessels I watch them unloading the cargo, with one eye on the wooden cases swinging dangerously close to my head.

There is sudden hush and all hands stop work. Every eye is turned to the gangway where the burly figure of an Hindustani maid is carefully descending. I wonder how she can see her way with that heavy veil over her face.

She reaches the bottom step safely. There is a general sigh of relief.

I move on.

conflict. Mr. Eden rightly stood firm to the strengthening of the Committee of Non-intervention in its admittedly difficult task of limiting any breaches of the agreement.

Such breaches were plainly exaggerated. Search for them must be difficult, but so far nobody has produced convincing evidence that arms are being supplied to one side or the other. In the investigation of an allegation that supplies had been carried from Hamburg in a British vessel to the Nationalist forces, our Foreign Office discovered that this ammunition had been delivered to the Spanish Government. There is an immense amount of rumour and little proved fact.

When the war is over, Britain will have no cause to feel ashamed of the part she has played in limiting its horrors.

BERLIN AND TOKYO CENSORSHIP

Anti-Communist Treaty Negotiations

DIRECTED AGAINST RUSSIA?

Shanghai, November 15.

It is learned that strict censorship has been clamped down on Japan news in Tokyo and Berlin despite denials of putting the finishing touches to anti-communist treaty negotiations initiated on the return recently to Japan of the German Ambassador, Herr von Dirksen.

The Foreign Office spokesman in Tokyo informed the correspondents that no news on the subject could be filed. An American journalist tried to send a message, but it was stopped. A Japanese journal which mentioned the matter was suppressed, and other newspapers were notified that news bearing on the treaty was not publishable.

The terms of the treaty are not known, but obviously they are aimed at restraining the Soviet according to a reliable informant from Tokyo, who adds that the treaty will be submitted to the Privy Council by Mr. Hirota in a few weeks.

It is understood that the signatories seek adhesion with other powers, notably Italy, although an immediate response is not expected.

JAPANESE MOVE IN SHANGHAI

Creation Of Virtual Concession

Shanghai, Nov. 16.

A definite move for the creation of a virtual Japanese concession in Shanghai has been launched by the influential Japanese Residents Association, whose foreign affairs committee has authorised its representatives to take up the matter with the Japanese Consul-General.

The committee proposes the creation of "a special administrative area" comprising the so-called extension or extra-settlement roads along the northern boundary of the International Settlement. Under this proposal a large section of Hongkong and Chapel would pass under Japanese control.

For the past six years the Chinese authorities have been pressing for the control of these other extension roads, which are at present administered internationally through the Shanghai Municipal Council.

DOG CHAINED TO TREE AND LEFT TO DIE

Said to have chained a dog to a tree in the middle of a wood and left it to die, Henry Arthur Smith, a carter, of Winters Hill, Bishop's Walkham, a married man with five children, was sentenced to a month's hard labour at Droxford, Hampshire, recently.

He was also disqualified for life from taking out a dog licence.

It was stated that the dog was found by a farmer after it had been left for ten days. It was too weak to stand and had had to be destroyed.

Smith, who pleaded not guilty, said that he gave the dog to a man who was to take it to Andover.

APPEAL DISMISSED

Crown Advocate On Question Of Abuse Of Extradition Rights

SHANGHAI ASSAULT CASE

An appeal by twelve Indians who were found guilty by Mr. C. H. Haines, the Registrar, in H.M. Police Court in Shanghai on August 31 of charges of assault and affray as a result of a disturbance in Miller Road on July 12 was made by Mr. E. L. Hartopp, counsel for the defendants in H.M. full court on November 10. The appeal was dismissed by the court, consisting of Sir Atholl MacGregor, Chief Justice, Judge Penrhyn Grant Jones, and Mr. C. H. Haines, acting Assistant Judge. The accused had received sentences which, in their application, were tantamount to twelve months' imprisonment with hard labour, following which they were to be deported, states the "N.C.D. News."

Asking for "leave to appeal against the sentence, Mr. Hartopp read from the statements signed by the accused, all of whom claimed to be innocent, ten said they were not involved in the affray, while the remaining two maintained they were struck by other Indians. Leave to appeal was granted.

On the question of an appeal against conviction, Mr. Hartopp pointed out that there were underlying circumstances involved, and possibly the Registrar was not aware of the real facts, which were not brought out in the case. He indicated that there were other proceedings, involving large sums, connected with the whole matter.

In reply to question from the court, Mr. Hartopp agreed that he was trying to ask for leave to bring out some fresh evidence.

CONVICTION UPHOLD

Chief Justice MacGregor said that in that case he had to satisfy the court that such evidence was not in "the possession of the defendants before the trial in the Police Court was concluded. This had not been done. The appeal against the conviction was dismissed, as no sufficient grounds had been given.

Appealing against the sentence, Mr. Hartopp raised the question of the deportation, which he said was generally only ordered for official reasons. It was pointed out to him by the court that although this might be the case, there was no such definite restriction placed upon the Registrar. Mr. Hartopp further submitted that the accused were "all good men of good character, and would be able to produce sureties for themselves to almost any amount and in any form. The affray was one between Indians only, and the Chinese community was not concerned with it.

EXTRATERRITORIAL RIGHTS

Mr. Victor Priestwood, the Crown Advocate, said that although the accused were sentenced on a charge of an affray, they were actually guilty of a more serious offence, that of an organised and premeditated attack by a large body on a small party of Indians, and they were lucky to get the sentence they did. Iron bars and sticks were used, and injuries which might have proved fatal were inflicted. He reminded the court that the British could not abuse the trust placed in them by their extraterritorial right; the Chinese courts could not deal with the matter, and the British court should therefore take a serious view of the case.

Giving judgement, Judge Grant Jones said that the Registrar had been very careful when going over the whole of the evidence. There were no grounds in law for the full court to interfere with the original sentence. He was impressed by the Crown Advocate's point that the court was a branch of the Chinese judicial system and existed under extraterritorial rights granted to British subjects.

It was therefore incumbent on the court to take a serious view of the whole matter, and for British subjects to behave themselves. It was clearly a case of a premeditated affray, and the sentence would be dismissed.

SUIYUAN TROOPS IN ACTION

Invaders Driven Back

Peiping, Nov. 16.

Some fighting occurred yesterday in the eastern section of Taolin county, Suiyuan. According to a Chinese report, between 2,000 and 3,000 Mongol cavalry, attacked Hunheherhu, but were repulsed by the Suiyuan troops with heavy losses.

A snow-storm raged throughout the operation.

SINO-JAPANESE DIFFERENCES

Nanking, Nov. 16.

Another meeting between Mr. Chang Chun, the Chinese Foreign Minister, and Mr. Shigeru Kawagoe, the Japanese Ambassador, is expected this week, although the prospects of an early solution of the Sino-Japanese differences remain practically negligible.

Further conversations between the Japanese Consul-General here and Mr. Kao Tsung-wu, chief of the Asiatic Affairs Bureau of the Chinese Foreign Office, to review the Sino-Japanese viewpoints, disclosed they were as divergent as before the last Chang Chun-Kawagoe meeting on November 10.

However, well-informed quarters believe that despite this lack of agreement negotiations are likely to drag on without a definite rupture.

FARNES ADOPTS A KANGAROO

Kenneth Farnes the Essex amateur, created a minor surprise recently when he walked into the hotel at which the M.C.C. cricketers were staying in Perth with a month-old kangaroo in his arms.

He had been with a shooting party 50 miles from Perth. There is little likelihood of Farnes taking the kangaroo to England, as the problem of feeding it for six months baffles even the ingenious W. "Fergie" Ferguson, who is scorer and baggage-man to the English team.

"AN APPLE A DAY" WITH THE SKIN ON

Sir Bruce Bruce-Porter's Easy Health Rules

Sir Bruce Bruce-Porter, in an Alliance of Honour lecture at Holy Trinity Church, Kingsway, recently, said if he had his way the sale of white bread would be made illegal.

The dairyman was prosecuted if his milk were lacking in the requisite proportion of cream, he said, but the miller was free to remove the whole of the vital food from the grain of his white bread.

He urged that at breakfast an apple with the skin left on should be eaten. "An apple a day would keep the doctor away only if the skin were left on."

For sleeplessness he recommended a walk before bed, a little light reading before going to sleep, and a hot water bottle in bed with a glass of warm water with a teaspoon of common salt was better than many sleeping draughts, he added.

FRENCH DIPLOMAT IN QUANDARY

Presenting Credentials In Rome

Rome, Nov. 16. One means whereby Italy will overcome the difficult recognition of the conquest of Abyssinia was the change of title of King Victor Emmanuel.

The new French Ambassador is waiting in Rome to present his credentials, but is hesitating owing to the fact that to address the King as Emperor of Abyssinia would mean acknowledging the annexation of Ethiopia which France does not want at present.

To enable the French Ambassador to take the post, the title of King has now been changed to King Victor of Italy and Emperor of the Italian Empire.—Reuter's Bulletin Service.

Blow At Weak Link In Government Armour

Cautious Entry Into City

London, November 16. The rebels are battering at the gates of Madrid. Latest messages from insurgent sources indicate that the insurgents found the breach in the Government defences for which they had been seeking and lost no time in striking.

The fact that the bridge of the French in the sector in which the insurgents crossed the Manzanares river had been blown up ought not to hamper their advance as the sluggish waters of the little river are only two feet deep and ought not to hold them up.

By advancing from the north the rebels are not only taking the western defences in the rear, but entering Madrid over ground eminently suitable for the use of tanks.

GENERAL VARELA CONFIDENT

The latest news from the front comes via Lisbon. “Bridges are of no interest to me at the moment. Everything is going on all right,” General Varela declared early this morning after the report of the crossing of the Manzanares.

General Varela's headquarters have been moved to Cuatro Vientos aerodrome, only four miles from the heart of Madrid.

The advance was heralded by a terrific bombardment, while bombers dropped fifty tons of explosives on the Government positions which were seen to be blazing furiously through a smoke screen.

SHELL FOR SHELL

Reuter's correspondent with the insurgents describes the fighting to have been most fierce at times. The mutter of machine guns never stopped for half an hour on end. Shrapnel and high explosives rained over the ground from the Madrid batteries in a circle embracing a mile radius, but the insurgents' batteries replied shell for shell.

Moors and Legionaries made a sweeping advance at bayonet point, carrying the ridge formerly held by the Government forces.—Reuter.

TENERIFFE REPORT

Paris, Nov. 16. A message broadcast early this morning from Tenerife gives the following report on the situation of the Madrid front:

“Great activity prevailed on Sunday on the El Escorial sector, where the Reds repeatedly tried to break through the Nationalist lines. All these attempts were repulsed with heavy losses. The Nationalist artillery succeeded in reducing the Red batteries to silence. Two Red airplanes piloted by Soviet Russians were shot down. Nationalist airplanes flew over Madrid on Sunday and bombarded the quarter of Cústos Caminos, as well as the Palazzo Iglesia Avenue.”—Transocean News Service.

RESISTANCE OVERCOME

Salamanca, Nov. 16. Three columns of the left flank of General Varela's army have crossed the Manzanares River. They drove across the river at 4 p.m. yesterday and occupied the Government's former positions, according to an official communique from insurgent headquarters.

These three columns continued their advance in the north-west sector of Madrid, which, it was hoped, would be entirely occupied by the end of the night, as “the enemy's resistance has been overcome.”

The river was crossed only after the insurgents had met and broken the most determined resistance of despair, the communique states.—Reuter.

RUSSIAN AID FOR MADRID

Reported Departure Of Troop Detachments

Berlin, Nov. 15. Fresh German efforts in London to initiate effective control of armaments shipments to Spain are regarded as probable in view of the delay of the insurgents before Madrid and the many reports of Russian arms and munitions shipments to the Government forces.

There is no disposition to link the Spanish question with the talks Herr Adolf Hitler, the Chancellor, has had with his army and other chiefs during the past few days. These conferences are believed to have been quite general in character.—Reuter.

de Campo's forest, where 200 militiamen, under cover of darkness, scaled the walls of the park and desperately attacked the insurgent outposts.

The attacking force was annihilated by the rebels, who also sustained severe losses in the fight. Trained units of the Government militia again attacked Colonel Castañon's column, which occupies a portion of the Casa de Campo, but the blow was delivered without artillery support and appeared to lack cohesion and determination.

Further north, Colonel Barton's column pushed forward and occupied houses near the Segovia bridge. It is believed the Government's machine-guns have withdrawn from this sector, probably taking up a new position on the Madrid side of the river.

Heavy fighting continued at other points south of Madrid throughout the entire day.—Reuter.

MORE BOMBS DROPPED

Madrid, Nov. 15. Ten insurgent bombers and 12 fighting planes raided Madrid this morning and dropped a number of bombs.

One fell on the university and others on the North Station and populous dwelling-quarters, causing a number of casualties.

Government fighting planes went up to the attack, but the insurgents fled.

It is unconfirmably reported that two insurgent bombers were later brought down by Government machines.

In three air raids over Madrid to-day 17 persons were killed and over 100 wounded, according to a communique issued this evening.

The papers publish an estimate, which they claim to be fully corroborated, that Government anti-aircraft gunners have destroyed 100 insurgent planes in the past fortnight.—Reuter.

London, Nov. 16. The second reading of the Public Order Bill, one of the main provisions in which is the prohibition of political uniforms, will be read a second time in the Commons to-day. It is rare that a major piece of legislation dealing with matters affecting all political parties comes before the House without notice having been given of any single amendment as is the case with this measure.—British Wireless.

GOVERNMENT CLAIMS

Madrid, Nov. 15. A communique issued to-day after stating that a large number of women and children had been killed in the air raids of the previous day, declares the insurgents tried to force a way over the Manzanares River by way of the French Bridge, to the north-west of the city.

A mass attack, led by Moroccan troops, aided by 15 tanks, was repulsed by the Government infantry, assisted by planes.

This morning a new attack was repulsed at the same point.

Legionnaires and Moroccans violently attacked again in the afternoon, after an artillery bombardment of intensity. Infantry, supported by tanks, advanced with fine courage.

The militia, says the communique, pretended to retreat. They executed a sudden “turning movement” however, and forced the insurgents back to their own lines. It is unofficially claimed that three tanks fell into the hands of the Government soldiery.—Reuter.

KING CAROL'S SPEECH

Rumanian Policy Outlined

FULL SUPPORT FOR LEAGUE

(“Hong Kong Daily Press” Special)

Bucharest, Nov. 16. King Carol opened Parliament with a speech from the Throne. The King in the course of his address said that the policy of the Rumanian Government would continue to see its highest aim in the maintenance of peace and the integrity of her frontiers, “which have been established for eternity.”

He emphasised that the Government was convinced that this aim could best be attained by strengthening Rumania's existing treaties, and having good relations with all states within the framework of the League of Nations. The Government was resolved to support any action calculated to increase the authority of the Geneva institution.

After mentioning the repeated conferences between the States of the Little Entente and the Balkan Entente, which furnished unsurpassable opportunities for reaffirming the solidarity and harmony of views prevailing between these state groups, the King referred to the visits of Prince Paul in Prague and President Benes in Belgrade, and his own visits to both neighbouring states.

The speech concluded with an appeal to all Rumanians to unite in politics.

The King had an enthusiastic reception both when arriving at and when leaving Parliament House.—Transocean News Service.

Tourists Stranded In Honolulu

Honolulu, Nov. 16. An appeal to American shipping strikers to let one ship at least leave port, was made by the Yorkshirer, Mr. James Fenton, who landed in Hawaii while taking a holiday trip home after spending eleven years in Shanghai.

He is on the Shanghai police force and has been stranded in Honolulu for days on account of the United States shipping strike and the general tie-up in this port.

SOVEREIGNTY OVER HER WATERWAYS

Germany's Repudiation Of Undertakings

British Press Comment

(“Hong Kong Daily Press” Special)

London, November 16. Political circles here believe that the Foreign Secretary, Mr. Anthony Eden will make a statement on Germany's re-establishment of her sovereignty over her waterways.

The “Daily Telegraph” says that the action on the part of Germany of repudiating a further part of the Versailles Treaty aroused rather regret than surprise or uneasiness, and added that the importance of the German step will be thoroughly examined by experts of the British Government.

The “Times” says that the German step has psychological rather than material importance, and adds the obviously inspired view that it is to be regretted that Germany did not follow Turkey in seeking to gain her wish by way of negotiations.

The “News Chronicle” says that the position has become absurd, and the former allies powers would have been well advised had they themselves abrogated the clauses in question long ago. The paper attributes the responsibility for the omission of this step to France.—Transocean News Service.

PRAGUE SATISFIED

Prague, Nov. 16. Germany's announcement that she will re-establish her sovereignty over her inland waterways has not caused much surprise here, although Czechoslovakia is directly affected by the German Government's action.

Political circles here consider the Berlin step as a logical consequence of Germany's refusal to recognise certain clauses of the Versailles Treaty. The assurance given by the German Government that nothing will be changed in the practical situation of shipping on the Elbe, or in regard to the Czechoslovakian Free Port Zone in Hamburg, has caused much satisfaction here.—Transocean News Service.

FRENCH ATTITUDE

Paris, Nov. 15. Enquiries here as to the official attitude towards Germany's step to re-establish sovereignty over the inland waterways have elicited the information that the French Government is not yet prepared to announce its attitude towards the new unilateral denunciation of the provisions of the Versailles Treaty. The Government, it is stated, would first get into touch with all other Governments interested. Moreover the German note would have to be carefully studied, in order to form a clear idea of its practical consequences.

A meeting of the departmental officials was held in the Quai d'Orsay on Saturday, which was attended by Leon Blum, and in the absence of the Foreign Minister, Delbos, by Secretary of State, Vivenot.

The reaction of the press is distinctly unfavourable. The “Paris Soir” says that the German step had not made a good impression either in Paris or London, although it could not be said that it was particularly surprising. The argument in the whole press is that Germany could have obtained fulfilment of all demands by negotiations. The “Excelsior” asked whether Germany is contemplating some kind of monopoly on her inland waterways, adding that sooner or later a new international agreement must be made, since it was impossible that navigation of the mid-European waterways should be left under the “despotism” of a single power.

“Germany has now given the Versailles Treaty a new lease of life,” said the “Odeon,” adding that the relations between Germany and Czechoslovakia in particular, will be given a completely new turn by this latest step.

In the opinion of the “Echo de Paris” an immediate or sharp answer to Germany is impossible, seeing that much more serious violations of the Versailles Treaty had been committed.—Transocean News Service.

MARXISTS HOLD UP FRENCH SHIP

Paris, Nov. 15. Marseilles Marxists were successful in preventing a French ship with a shipment declared as 5 tons of sugar for Palma de Mallorca, to leave.

The Marxists feared that the “sugar” was in reality munition for the Nationalists, who are in possession of the Balearic Isles.—Transocean News Service.

NATIONALIST ARMY BULLETIN

Salamanca, Nov. 15. An official bulletin issued by the Headquarters of the Nationalist Army states that in the sector of the Madrid Front, further operations were carried out, and the southern suburb positions consolidated.

Red Militia activities, it is stated, have slackened, with the exception of an attempted attack by the Nationalist right flank, which was, however, successfully repulsed.

According to an announcement from the radio station Villadollid, the Nationalists succeeded in capturing an important Government position in the village of Pozuelo de Alarcón. The capture of this village not only strengthens the flank of the attacking Nationalist forces in Madrid, but also commands communication between the capital and El Escorial.—Transocean News Service.

TURKISH FLEET FOR MALTA

London, Nov. 16. The Turkish Fleet which is to pay a courtesy visit to the British Fleet at Malta left Istanbul to-day for Piraeus and Salonika.—British Wireless.

COTTON CROPS

London, Nov. 16. With reference to Moscow's five-year cotton plan, the Russian cotton estimate includes seed which is about two-thirds of the total.

The United States Department of Agriculture in a review recently assumed the crop to be 2,650,000 bales, which is one-third of the Soviet total. Last year it was 2,360,000 bales. Actually she stands fourth after China. The carry-over of the unavailable crop figure is most suspect, but it is believed now to be self-sufficient for the present unexpanded textile activity.—Reuter.

SOVIET ARREST OF GERMANS

(“Hong Kong Daily Press” Special)

Paris, Nov. 16. Commenting on the arrests of German nationals in Moscow and Leningrad, the paper “Matin” writes that the “Soviet Union seems to be determined to precipitate a conflict with Germany in order to deflect general attention from the events in Spain, where Soviet Russian aspirations have suffered a serious setback.”—Transocean News Service.

ITALIAN VISIT TO HUNGARY

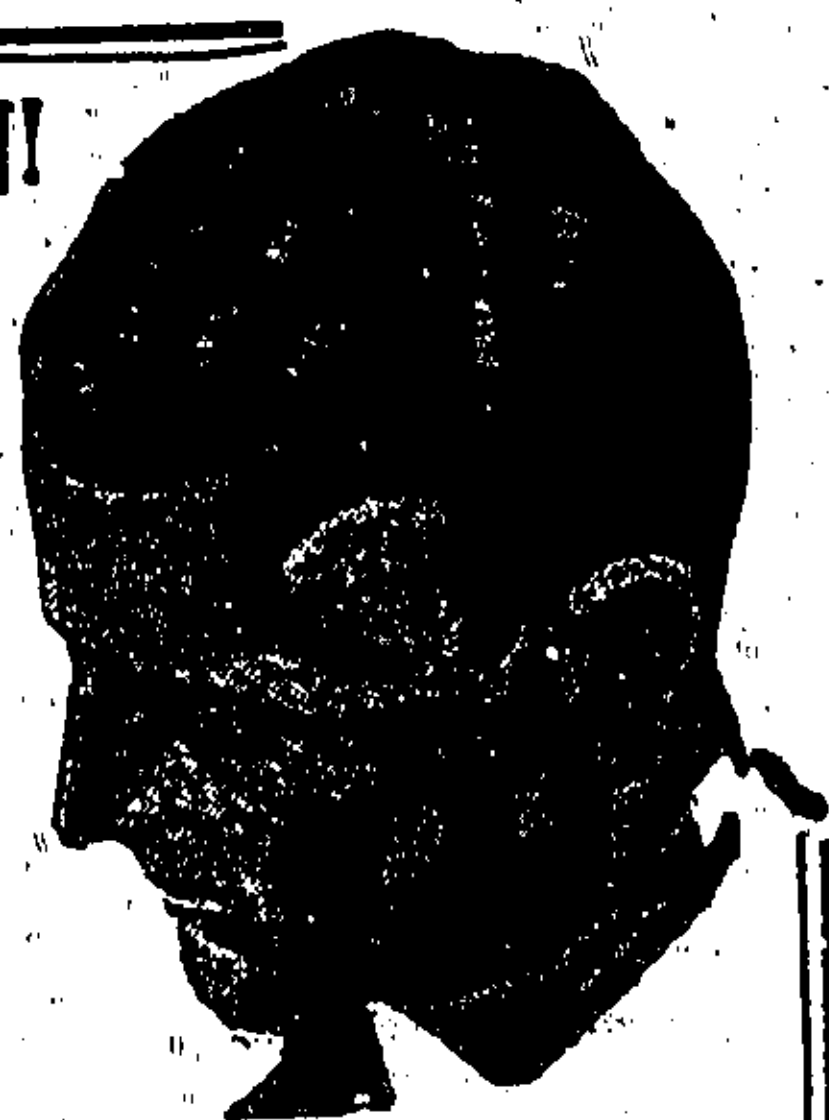

(“Hong Kong Daily Press” Special)

Budapest, Nov. 16. An official communique commenting on the result of the talks conducted by the Italian Foreign Minister, Count Ciano, and the Hungarian statesman during the former's visit to this city states that “all matters of mutual concern have been examined in friendly spirit, and the negotiations showed that both countries are in complete agreement.”—Transocean News Service.

CANTON TENNIS

K.C.C. Spend An Enjoyable Time

With the scores of five matches all on Saturday the K.C.C. took the courts against the Deutscher Garten Club late Sunday morning before a fairly large crowd of spectators.

Nogalski and Rode started promisingly against Ramsey and Philippens but fell away badly in the next two sets only claiming six games. Ramsey was erratic, but Philippens with a jobbing campaign found their opponents' weak spot and gained many points with this shot.

Gray and Miss A. Mackenzie unexpectedly went down to Nogalski and Mrs. Lehmann in straight sets. At no time did they strike form although praise must be given to Mrs. Lehmann who played remarkably well. She placed and served excellently.

DECIDING MATCH

In perhaps what could be called the deciding match Fincher and Miss Dalziel beat Bodiker and Mrs. Kanter in three sets, the winners taking the third set after a lead of 4 games to two against them. Miss Dalziel played the game of her life and did not seem to be worried with Bodiker's drives which she returned with interest. Mrs. Kanter played well in the second set but fell away in the third. Fincher played his usual steady game and executed some nice kills at the net. Bodiker lost many points by his volleying which he could not get going.

Dillner and Schneider played steady tennis to beat Hirst and Freeman in straight sets although the latter had set point on Freeman's service which failed him rather badly in that particular game. Although all four are veterans the game was full of sparkling moments.

BRILLIANT TENNIS

With the score of 9 matches to eight in Kowloon's favour Bodiker took the court against Gray rather late in the evening and some brilliant tennis was witnessed. Gray was driving very hard and had Bodiker on the run many a time. He judged his net attack nicely and gained many points by doing so. Gray had one set point in the first set and with a little luck should have taken it, his drop shots let him down at this stage.

The second set was also fought out at a terrific pace but with the score at six games all the match was abandoned owing to bad light. It was a pity the match was started so late as the draw left K.C.C. winning by the odd match.

LADIES' GAMES

The ladies of both Clubs played well. Miss Griffiths was perhaps the outstanding player for K.C.C. Miss Mackenzie played nice tennis in her singles but was badly off form in the Mixed Doubles. Miss Dalziel was steady throughout all her games, her backhand and forehand driving being the feature of her game.

For the German Club, Mrs. Rode was most impressive, she possesses a very free style and plays a very nice net game. Mrs. Kanter found the pace of Miss Griffiths a bit too much for her in the singles but in the doubles with Bodiker she showed how steady she can be. Mrs. Lehmann played a nice game, although her strokes lack power, she placed very nicely and was mainly responsible for two valuable points for the German Club.

BODIKER—GREAT PLAYER
Bodiker showed that he is really a great player on hard courts and seems to be improving each year. W. Sander also showed nice style and with a little more experience should go far in the game. Rode also showed signs of improvement in his game although his service was weak, being guilty of too many double faults.

SHOOTING

The German Club were much too good for their visitors. It was an eye-opener to those who had the pleasure of seeing the German ladies shoot. In fact they were mainly responsible for the large difference in the scores.

RESULTS

German Club (Men)—Messrs. Dillner, Rode, Nogalski, Sander, Bodiker, Schneider and Lehmann. 222 points.

CLUB DINNER

On Saturday evening, the Club was "At Home" to the K.C.C. party when nearly 50 sat down to dinner under the chairmanship of Mr. H. Schneider, President of the Club.

Mr. Schneider, in proposing the health of the visitors, offered them a warm welcome, and stressed how pleased the German Club was to be able to entertain them. The only thing he regretted was that there were not more young people in the German Club tennis team.

The toast was accorded musical honours, to which Mr. W. Hirst replied, saying how much they appreciated the generous hospitality of the German community in Tungshan, and how much the K.C.C. looking forward to receiving them back as visitors.

The toast to the Tungshan German Garden Club was enthusiastically honoured by the K.C.C. players, and afterwards dancing was enjoyed in the club's reconstructed lounge.

MISS JAMES AND OLLIFF WIN

Mixed Doubles Title At Queen's

The covered court championships were finished at Queen's Club recently, when J. S. Olliff and Miss Freda James won the mixed doubles after a stirring three-set final against C. E. Hare and Miss Hardwick. The score was 4-6, 7-5, 6-3.

It was the losers' second match of the day, for in the morning they had beaten Wilde and Miss Whitmarsh after two gruelling sets; but they gave no hint of previous strain in the first half of the final.

Indeed, with Hare crashing down service aces and smashing from all parts of the court, and Miss James repeatedly mistiming the ball, the chances of Olliff and his partner did not look rosy.

At this stage Miss Hardwick was lobbing like an angel, and Hare was coming in to register decisive kills.

In spite of his ally's lapses, however, Olliff continued to play sterling tennis, and in the second set his side was rewarded with a service-break through Miss Hardwick, which made them 4-2.

Then Miss James must needs drop her service from 30—love and the lead melted away.

HARE'S SERVICE CAPTURED

When their cause was darkest, like the light in the court, Miss James conned spectators, and this equipment seemed to turn the tide. At any rate, she began to hit ground stroke winners, and—finest coup of all—Hare's service was captured to give his adversaries the set.

In the final set Olliff and Miss James their revival inspiring them, played exceptionally well. Miss James shining in defence and Olliff serving and driving with deadly speed. The capture of Miss Hardwick's service gave them a lead which they held to the end, Olliff serving aces in the final game.

In the earlier match Wilde and Miss Whitmarsh might have won the long second set in which they led 4-1 if Hare had not read the mind of Miss Whitmarsh a little too closely; his interception at the net was very profitable and his partner kept her end up well.

All five of the covered court titles thus found new holders. The two singles went abroad—one to Sweden and the other to Chile; but the three doubles championships were all kept in this country, and the Midlands had a share in two of them.

Mixed Doubles Championship—Semi-final: C. E. Hare & Miss R. M. Hardwick bt F. H. D. Wilde & Miss M. Whitmarsh 6-4, 10-8. Final: J. S. Olliff & Miss F. James bt Hare & Miss Hardwick 4-6, 7-5, 6-3.

TOURIST TRAFFIC

Ottawa, Canada.—It is possible now to say that when the books for 1936 are closed Canadian immigration officials will have passed some 25,000,000 individuals into the Dominion in the twelve months. The majority are tourists from the United States who remain less than 24 hours, but all of them have to be seen and formally passed by the immigration men.

Not more than about 12,000 of these millions will be listed as immigrants. In the peak year of 1912-13 Canada received 382,000 settlers from other countries in twelve months, but the movement in recent years has dwindled to inconsiderable proportions.

Canada has thirty ocean ports of entry and 188 ports along the 3,000-mile boundary shared by the United States.

DUKE OF GLOUCESTER'S HUNTERS

The Duke of Gloucester is to sell his stud of hunters, says the "Morning Post."

The announcement has been received with regret in Leicester-shire hunting circles. The King was not expected to hunt, but it was hoped that the Duke would be visiting the county during the season.

Included in the Duke's stud are several well-known hunters, namely Ambush, Waving Palm, and Glacier. Ambush, a ten-year-old brown gelding, has won under National Hunt rules.

JEAN BATTEN'S EXPERIENCE

How She Flew Tasman Sea

NO SHIP; ONLY SKY AND WATER

A few minutes after Miss Jean Batten had landed at the aerodrome in Auckland, New Zealand, welcomed by a wildly cheering crowd of 15,000, having made the first direct solo flight from England, and a record crossing of the Tasman Sea, she said:

"I have beaten the air mail. It has always been my ambition to link Britain and New Zealand by air, and I left nothing to chance."

"Conditions on the journey from England, with one or two exceptions, were favourable and provided a striking contrast to my previous trip."

"I am not feeling at all tired. My flying time of 10 hours and 30 minutes over the Tasman lowers the record by one hour and 28 minutes, and is an average speed of 143 m.p.h."

"It was a great feeling to be in the air again on the last lap of my long journey, and to see Australia slide away. I did not see any ships, nothing but endless sky and sea."

PREPARED FOR ANYTHING

"It was hard flying into the rising sun, but I had great faith in my navigation, which had guided me unerringly across the South Atlantic on a longer sea crossing. The meteorological reports proved accurate and I was prepared for anything."

"It was not bumpy over the Tasman, but, anyway, I am accustomed to being thrown about in the air."

"I did not think of the Tasman as a separate flight, but as the last hop of the whole flight."

"It was a great relief to make an accurate landfall at New Plymouth and the final stage up the coast was bliss."

"My arrival at Mangere aerodrome was the greatest moment of my life."

"What a little place this is to land on! When I saw it I nearly turned back to Sydney. My plane requires at least 220 yards runway. Still, I managed it all right, though I thought I should knock someone down."

Miss Batten's father, an Auckland dentist, was the first to welcome her. He ran forward and embraced her as she stepped from the machine, looking radiantly happy and not in the least tired.

The Mayor of Auckland, in the first welcoming speech, said:

"Our first thoughts should be of thankfulness to the Almighty for bringing back our good girl to Auckland."

Then he turned to Miss Batten and added, smiling:

"You are a very naughty girl, and you ought to be well spanked for giving us such an anxious time."

ENTRY INTO THE CITY

After her welcome at the aerodrome Miss Batten made a triumphal entry into the city at the head of a long procession of ears. Standing up in her car she smilingly acknowledged the cheers of the people lining the route.

Both Houses of Parliament late in the afternoon united in expressing their enthusiastic congratulations to Miss Batten.

Mr. Savage, the Prime Minister, said:

"This is one of the biggest accomplishments of the age. In the apt words recently used of her by another speaker, she has beaten the birds at their own game."

"TALKING" BOOKS
FOR THE BLIND

Lord Nuffield's $35,000 Gift

Lord Nuffield who last year gave $5,000 for the development of talking books for the blind, has made a further gift of $35,000 for this purpose. It will be paid in seven annual instalments.

A gift of $500 a year for three years has also been made by the Carnegie United Kingdom Trustees.

The talking book scheme to provide a new method of "reading" for the blind was started two years ago by the Sound Recording Committee of the National Institute for the Blind in co-operation with St. Dunstan's. An ordinary book of this kind is composed of a set of ten or a dozen 12-inch gramophone records, each side of which "reads" for 25 minutes.

More than 1,000 volumes are in circulation from a central library in London. The recordings include selections from the Bible, the English classics, biography, and even modern detective stories.

PHILIPPINE MINING
NEWS

There is little fear that the maritime strike which is paralyzing shipping on the Pacific coast and threatening coastwise and deep sea commerce on the Gulf coast and the Atlantic seaboard will interfere materially with Philippine mining.

Warned several months ago of the likelihood of labour difficulties, Philippine mining organizations have laid in several months' supplies of dynamite, cyanide, and other necessities. While shipments of new equipment and machinery from the Pacific coast may be delayed for some time, such shipments can be made via Canada or on Japanese ships.

In case the strikes are prolonged for six months or more, the Philippine mining companies will seek Japanese and European stores.

Steps have already been taken by several concerns towards establishing connections with foreign suppliers, so that future sources of necessities may be assured.

The general opinion in Manila seems to be that the strike will bring a considerable loss of trade to American dealers in dynamite, cyanide, and machinery. New connections made during the strike are apt to be continued when labour conditions become better in the United States, it is reported.

With bodegas full and orders pending with foreign concerns, Philippine mining companies are watching the American maritime situation with interest untinted with fears for the future.

NEW PASSAGEWAY AT BANK OF ENGLAND

Handed Over To The City

The Bank of England presented a new thoroughfare to the City of London recently. As a result, pedestrians turning from Lothbury into Princes-street will be saved about thirty seconds in time.

The presentation was made with appropriate ceremony by Mr. Montagu Norman, Governor of the Bank, to Sir Percy Vincent, the former Lord Mayor of London, during the lunch hour, in front of a throng of City workers.

The new passageway runs through the Tivoli Corner of the Bank of England, and round the domed roof runs the inscription: "The Bank made this way through Tivoli Corner for the citizens of London, A.D. 1834."

"By the happy co-operation of all concerned," said Mr. Montagu Norman, "this passageway has been constructed within the Corner so as to preserve its aesthetic beauty, and at the same time to make some provision for the needs of those who have to pass this way."

The Lord Mayor, in reply, said that he thought that the Governor and Directors of the Bank were to be congratulated on their foresight in giving up the Corner for the use of citizens.

Toronto, Canada.—Canada still is paying for the Great War in heavy annual charges, but the total each year is dropping steadily. War charges in the latest fiscal year amounted to about $32,000,000, but this was some $4,250,000 less than the amount that had to be raised four years earlier for interest on the war debt and for pensions resulting from war service.

"HUMBUB ABOUT VITAMINS"

Doctor Urges Good Plain Food

WOMEN AND BIRTH-RATE

"There is more humbug talked about food to-day than ever before in the history of man," said Dr. H. Rose (Buckinghamshire), referring to vitamins, in a speech recently at the National Association of Insurance Committees' Conference at Bournemouth.

"What is wanted is a good, plain, wholesome mixed diet," he continued.

"Do you now see the stockpots, with meat and vegetables and a good old suet dumpling to go all round? It is appalling that you should get people being led aside by vitamins here and vitamins there. My godfathers! If they would only take perfectly plain wholesome food with good vegetables."

Dr. H. Rose said that while sanitation and housing conditions had improved, the maternal mortality rate had risen.

RATE LOWER AMONG POOR.

"Why is that?" he asked. "It is a fact that the maternal mortality rate is higher among the well-to-do than it is among the poor. Modern woman in this respect is comparing unfavourably with her ancestor. The individual who works the hardest; who, I might say, is up against it, is the one who will do the best."

"The general rush of to-day—the wireless, the cinema, and the hixings and the holidays—is not an ideal preparation for the individual."

The expectant mother needed sunshine and open-air exercise. When one went into homes one saw a tin-opener on the table nowadays.

INCREASED DRUG COSTS

Mr. Stephen H. Payne, in his Presidential address, spoke of "the very disgusting increase in the cost of drugs and appliances. The Ministry have recently reduced the percentage of advances to chemists in respect of dispensing fees, and this points to the urgent necessity for considering whether the supervision of insurance prescribing should not be strengthened, and whether more responsibility for supervision should not fall upon local committees, who realised the importance of keeping the Chemists' Fund solvent. The reinstatement into medical benefit of an enormous number of people who, through unemployment, had lost their title to it, was, he said, one of the most satisfactory features of the year."

When the conference instructed the executive Council to urge the Ministry to place funds at the disposal of the Committees to enable them to take a larger part in education, Mr. Fairbairn (Worcester) declared: "Instead of using honeyed words, you should go to the Treasury and ask for some of the £20,000,000 Mr. Churchill took away from us. You have to punch hard in the right place."

FURTHER TIN RUMOURS

The price of tin rose a further 24 pence recently, and cash closed at 220s 12d 6d. The rise was accompanied by unconfirmed rumours of progress in the negotiations for prolonging the restriction agreement. The difference of view between the British and the Siamese on the Siamese quota is believed now to be small. Agreement on the basis of a standard tonnage of between 17,000 and 18,000 tons a year for Siam may be possible for both parties.

But the real question is whether the Dutch and the Siamese can come into line. At the moment there is little sign of this. The Dutch attitude has grown appreciably more rigid since the guilder left gold, and the fact that they are at present the only substantial sellers does not encourage the expectation of immediate agreement.

Meanwhile heavy buying by tin-plate manufacturers continues. Consumers of tin are believed to have kept their purchases on a small scale for some time, in the expectation of a fall in the price. The statistical position, however, shows little sign of easing. The increase in supplies this month is now estimated at only 750 tons, and it is obvious that even in the event of a complete breakdown of restriction supplies must remain small for several months.

WAR ON FOG AT KEW

Filtered Air To Be Tried In Glass Houses

A method of excluding fog from the glass houses at Kew Gardens is to be tried this winter in co-operation with the Office of Works. Sir Arthur Hill, the Director, stated at the National Smoke Abatement Society's Conference at South Kensington, recently, that filtered air would be forced into the houses by fans through fabric and charcoal filters and passed over the hot water pipes to be warmed.

It was hoped that the clean air thus introduced would so raise the pressure inside the houses that unfiltered, foggy air would be prevented from entering.

"Every foggy morning," Sir

Arthur said, "bushels of healthy-looking leaves are gathered up in the Palm House and the Temperate House at Kew. Many kinds of begonias, become defoliated (a night and the leaves of others become burned before they fall off."

The sooty deposits on the glass houses were so sticky that they had to be scrubbed off by hand, often two or three times, during the winter.

Mr. Noel Carrington, speaking on the smoke nuisance in London, said that the Government were setting "a pretty bad example."

"One of the blackest smoke clouds in the whole town," he said, "rises over Whitehall in the morning when the fires are being lighted in the Government offices to warm the statesmen's coat-tails."

IN THE POLICE REPORTS

Projecting Lenses Stolen

Mr. Victor Hugo, the manager of the Oriental Theatre and a member of the Board of Censors, has reported to the authorities the theft of two projecting lenses and a fountain pen from his premises at Kayamally Building, fourth floor, between 4.30 and 8.30 p.m. on Saturday.

The stolen articles are valued at $63, and it is thought that the thief entered through an open window at the rear of the operating theatre.

NAME PLATE LOST

Mr. F. Bumann, manager of the Deutsche Farben Handelsgesellschaft (Wabbel & Co.), of the second floor of Prince's Building, reports the loss of the brass plate bearing the company's name in front of the office. The plate is valued at $4.

The theft occurred between 4 p.m. on Sunday and 9 a.m. yesterday.

DOOR LOCK FORCED

The third victim of theft was Mr. H. E. Arms, manufacturers' agent, of the French Bank Building, third floor, who lost clothing (two overcoats) and a brown leather grip valued at $75 some time between November 13 and 9 a.m. yesterday. The burglar forced open the door lock of the office and made good his escape without being noticed by anyone.

PICKPOCKET VICTIM

Lo Yan, an inspector of the Opium Suppression Bureau at Swatow was the victim of a pickpocket yesterday when his leather wallet containing one $5 Hong Kong note, and some small currency in Watow coins was lost. The total value, with the purse, was $7.65.

The culprit, alleged to be Lau Cheung Lam, 23, unemployed, of 142, Sai Yuen Choi Street, first floor, was caught after a short chase, and in the ensuing tussle, only the wallet was recovered. The money had been lost during the pursuit.

the Chinese. He held no fear that the water supply was contaminated as, if that were so, then the outbreak would be general.

Dr. Pope further stated that he did not believe that the disease might be traced to sickly cows but rather thought that it was due to the careless handling of the milk after it had been taken from the animals.

"The outbreak is lessening," the Medical Officer explained, "undoubtedly because residents have been taking greater precautions by boiling their foodstuffs since the authorities warned the public."

LEADING PRACTITIONER'S VIEW

When interviewed by a "Daily Press" representative yesterday afternoon, a leading local medical practitioner stated that a few years ago during an epidemic of diphtheria in the Colony, the source was certainly traced to the milk supply.

The doctor told our representative that the question of water could be ruled out straightaway. He was inclined to agree with the opinion expressed by Dr. Pope that milk might be blamed for the present dysentery outbreak.

"The reason for my suspicion is this," said our medical informant. "Since milk is such an essential article of food, especially in babies and young children, I don't think that I am far wrong."

Asked what was the best course of precaution against dysentery, the doctor stated that in the meantime it was either to boil the milk or pasteurize it.

SLIGHT CASES

TWO CHINESE CHILDREN

It was learned yesterday that at the Hong Kong Sanatorium and Hospital, Happy Valley, where all classes of the Chinese community are admitted, the medical authorities had not met with any of the acute cases of dysentery reported amongst the European children.

A large number of the Chinese babies, our representative was informed, are breast-fed and the older children are getting other food to eat, such as rice and other edibles.

One case was admitted to the Sanatorium on Saturday and another case was scheduled to be admitted. Both were regarded not to be in any danger.

The hospital had had no recent cases of deaths of Chinese children from dysentery and had never had a large number of cases of this disease.
